IRIS

THE flowers are beautiful in form and wonderful in structure. In colors we find royal-purple and gold, all shades of blue from delicate azure to deepest velvet, cream and snowy-white, violet so dark as to be almost black, shades of fawn and brown, copper and bronze, crimson and rose, ruffled, bordered, penciled and splashed in marvelous designs, some with texture of extreme and exquisite delicacy, gleaming in the sunlight like the tracery of frost, others like heavy satin and velvet.

CULTURE

They will stand more neglect than any flower we know. They delight in hot sunshine and well drained soil. They should not be planted in wet places, as this will cause decay of the rhizomes. During spring and their blooming season they are very appreciative of water, but after their blooming season, during the resting period, they should have a good drying out. They may be planted in early spring, but August and September, their dormant season, is recommended as the better time.

NO hardy perennial is of more permanent value than the Peony. The first cost is the only cost, and they continue to increase in size and value for many years. The foliage is rich and of beautiful deep green color, which renders the plant very ornamental even when out of flower, and few other flowers are so well adapted for interior decoration and none make more massive color effect when planted in a border or in a bed on the lawn. Peonies range in color from cream and pure white through the various shades of pink and red to the deepest purple and maroon, in all possible combinations of tint and form.

They thrive best in a well drained, rich deep loam soil. Any good fertilizer if well incorporated with the soil will do, none is better than rotted cow manure placed below the roots so that the root-lets will not be affected until they have had a good start. Do not allow manure to come in contact with the roots. September is the best month to transplant Peonies, although they can be safely planted later. The prices quoted are for good sized roots, which should bloom the following spring. For extra large clumps double these prices.

Japanese Iris

THE Japanese Iris plants are of slender build, the foliage narrower than that of the Bearded, and of deeper green. The great flowers of strange and striking beauty are held erect upon slender very strong stems three feet and over in height. The flowers are sometimes self-colored, but more often have two shades combined, with a golden blotch. The single varieties have three large spreading petals, the double varieties six.

Culture—They will grow and thrive in any good mellow soil, well enriched, and well worked. They like plenty of moisture in summer, although it is not absolutely necessary, but water standing on them in winter will kill them. We recommend spring planting only for these Irises. If they must be planted in autumn, do it as early as possible, firm the ground well, and cover with straw or litter.

Blue.	Blue, white center stripe.....	25c
Gold Bound.	Pure white, base of petals yellow.	25c
Orion.	Reddish-pink, white center, white veins.	25c
Royal Purple.	Purple and gold.....	25c
Topaz.	White, splashed with light blue.....	25c
